

HE REMINDS ME OF MY FATHER

It was truly uncanny how much this guy reminded me of my dad, but that ended up he reminded me so much of the first man I'd ever been close toâ€”my dad. 2.

So, every time your boyfriend holds doors for you, listens to you when you talk and treats you like a princess; every time he's honest with you in every way, thank your dad for guiding you in the right direction. Because you met these people at a time in your life when you had developed skills to analyze peopleâ€”their behaviors, their motives, and their mentality. You are comfortable dealing with these types of personalities and liking these types of guys seem to be engraved in your brain. My boyfriend is six feet tall with fair skin and light hair; my dad is more like 5'7"-ish, used to have dark brown hair, and now likes to joke that he resembles Albert Einstein. When I met my previous boyfriend, the similarities between my dad and him were very obvious to me. And, he treats me like the princess I grew up thinking I was. As the relationship progresses, you learn more about your partner and you start to make the connections. But, at the same time, we should thank our dads for being such an influential part of our lives and for showing us what a true gentleman should be. The two of you begin to talk about the past, hopes for the future, and you share your secrets with him, even the silly ones from when you were 13 years old. Partially because I had awful taste in men, but mostly because from a young age, my dad showed me what a great man looks like. I definitely see that. You will each grab something healthy and one unhealthy item for the trip. It also doesn't seem all that strange that my sister's chosen a guy who has a lot in common with my dad, too. You want so badly to see your father in himâ€”the good things you expected to be in this manâ€”that you wait for them, or even imagine they are there. Your impressions are stuck Was your father always absent because of his job as a businessman? They were the same astrological sign only days apart. His dedication to his studies, his aspirations and motivation, they all are helping me become a better person. Learn to differentiate between the surface traits and the inner workings of someone. I felt like I was reliving my childhood sometimes. And you might find yourself constantly disappointed. Their Values Out of all the men you have met in your life, there was something about the way your current boyfriend treated you that made you want to pursue a relationship with him. It felt easy to relate to him because of these things. But reliving some of these things through a romantic partner is an entirely different thing. What a dream come true! But their commonalities, when they crop up, are striking -- the kinds of books they're into, their love of airplanes and history and conspiracy theory, and above all, they share a genuinely compassionate, kind, patient nature. We gravitate to what we know, what we're comfortable with.